Rebuilding Benghazi with Zoho: Digital Power for Modern Infrastructure

Case Study

Overview

Why Digital Project Governance Matters in Benghazi's Rebuild

Libya's construction sector is entering a major rebuilding cycle, especially in Benghazi, where projects span housing, utilities, hospitals, roads, and commercial spaces.

Despite rising demand, many firms struggle due to:
- Uncoordinated project planning across sites
- Slow approvals and paperwork delays
- Cost overruns and unclear budget ownership
- Weak procurement and stock visibility
- Inconsistent reporting to sponsors and authorities
- Low workforce efficiency and poor accountability

To deliver large urban projects with speed, safety, and transparency, construction companies need structured workflows, real-time analytics, and strong financial governance supported by digital platforms.
